The Honorable George Miller, Chair
Committee on Education and Labor
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

The Honorable John Kline, Ranking Member
Committee on Education and Labor
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Chairman Miller and Ranking Member Kline:

As the House Education and Labor Committee prepares to reauthorize the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA), we urge you to continue and expand the Committee's strong bi-partisan support for before-school, afterschool and summer learning programs through 21st Century Community Learning Centers (21st CCLC). As local, state and national youth-serving organizations with a presence throughout the nation, we understand how critical this program is to providing support for more than 1 million children in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. A wealth of research and data demonstrates that these programs help children academically, socially and behaviorally.

Organizations like ours see the value of 21st CCLC as an essential source of afterschool program funding that leverages a wide array of support—local, state and private—as well as partners, including faith-based organizations, nonprofits, businesses, educational organizations and volunteers.

Despite the demand for and success of afterschool programs, on any given day more than 15 million children are unsupervised after school and more than 18 million would be in programs if they were available and affordable. Now is the time to expand access for more of our most at-risk students, not divert much needed afterschool funding to other programs.

During the hours of 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. when children are most at risk for juvenile crime and experimentation with drugs, alcohol, cigarettes and sex, afterschool programs have a proven record of keeping children safe. Working families also reap the benefits from afterschool programs; parents who are concerned about their children being unattended after the school day ends miss an average of eight days of work per year. Decreased worker productivity related to parental concerns about afterschool care costs businesses an estimated $50-$300 billion per year. Recent research has also confirmed the positive impact these programs have on student behavior and academic success: a review of 35 evaluations of academically focused out-of-school programs for at-risk youth found that students who enrolled in these programs, on average, showed improved performance in reading and in mathematics.

In addition to protecting and expanding afterschool programming and opposing any cuts to this much needed program, we urge the committee to look to afterschool partners when designing school reform models. Afterschool programs are able to tap into the best of the community—colleges, museums, scientists, artists, musicians, volunteers, libraries and youth development workers—to teach our children critical workforce skills and connect their passions to learning. The very nature of these voluntary afterschool programs forces an innovative curriculum where students come because they want to learn, not because they have to learn. We believe that there is enormous opportunity to help our most at-risk students and improve our most struggling schools if we include community based organizations in the design and implementation of school reform.

Thank you for continuing the strong, bipartisan support for the 21st Century Community Learning Centers program and making sure the lessons learned by the afterschool community over the past decade help inform school reform.
