Melvin, Michigan Volunteer Working to Strengthen Afterschool Programs in Lansing

Justin Rumenapp Joins Eight Other Afterschool Alliance VISTA Volunteers Nationally to Support Afterschool Sustainability and Expand Nutritional Resources

Afterschool programs help working families, keep kids safe and inspire learning. In communities like Lansing, they are considered vital resources. But the economic downturn has put a squeeze on programs, causing many to scale back their offerings or even close their doors. Justin Rumenapp, an AmeriCorps VISTA volunteer, is working with the Afterschool Alliance to change that.

Along with eight other VISTA volunteers selected from across the country, Rumenapp is working to develop a local afterschool sustainability plan. His work includes identifying local resources and needs and collaborating with local and national leaders to strengthen afterschool programs in Lansing. He is working closely with the Michigan After-School Partnership. He began his service in August of this year, and will complete his service in August 2012. Other Afterschool Alliance VISTA volunteers are working to increase local participation in free afterschool and summer meals programs.

“Today, children and parents depend on high quality afterschool programs to provide engaging hands-on learning opportunities, nutritious and healthy snacks and meals, and opportunities to explore the sciences, arts, physical fitness and more. But many of these same programs are in dire financial straits. That’s why the Afterschool Alliance is delighted to have the support of Justin Rumenapp in Lansing. We are looking forward to the contributions he will make in helping keep the doors open at afterschool programs, so that more children and families can benefit from all they have to offer,” said Jodi Grant, Executive Director of the Afterschool Alliance.

Rumenapp is working to ensure that 21st Century Community Learning Centers (21st CCLC ) continue to provide high quality afterschool programs for low-income children. The 21st CCLC program provides funding for school/community partnerships at schools that serve primarily low-income students. To help maintain this funding in Michigan, Rumenapp is working to increase community engagement and program sustainability through engaging community volunteers, creating sustainability plans to ensure long-term success of programs, gathering data and research to show the positive impact of these programs, and examining other programs’ sustainability models.

The need for afterschool is great. Research conducted by the Afterschool Alliance has shown that only 12 percent of Michigan's K-12 students are in afterschool programs, while 31 percent care for themselves after the school day ends. Nationally more than 15 million children are unsupervised after the school day ends.
