

A Preview of New York Data from the America After 3 PM Household Survey on Afterschool

Care Arrangements: In the America After 3 PM survey, New York parents/guardians were asked about their children's regular participation in various afterschool care arrangements. (Note: Care arrangements add up to greater than 100% due to multiple regular care arrangements for many children.)

- While most New York children, 65%, spend some portion of the hours after school in the care of a parent or guardian, 27% of New York's K-12 youth are responsible for taking care of themselves. These children spend an average of more than 7 hours per week unsupervised after school.
- In contrast, only 15% of New York's K-12 youth participate in afterschool programs. On average, afterschool participants spend 9 hours per week in afterschool programs. Participation averages 3.4 days per week for 2.1 hours per day.
- Other care arrangements include traditional child care centers (9%), sibling care (12%) and non-parental adult care, such as a grandparent or neighbor (18%).

Need or Demand for Afterschool

- Nearly 28% of the K-12 youth in self-care would be likely to participate in an afterschool program if one were available in the community.
- Similarly, 36% of all children not in afterschool would be likely to participate if an afterschool program were available in the community, regardless of their current care arrangement.

Satisfaction with Afterschool Programs

- Ninety-two percent of New York parents are extremely or somewhat satisfied with the afterschool program their child attends.
- In New York, the top 3 reasons cited for selecting an afterschool program are child enjoyment, convenient location, and affordability.*
- Parents of non-participants believe that their children would benefit most from afterschool programs in the following ways: by having fun, academic enrichment, improved physical activity, improved social skills, by having help completing homework, and by staying safe and out of trouble.

Contextual Information about Afterschool Programs

- In New York, public schools are the largest provider of afterschool programs. YMCAs, religious organizations, and Boys and Girls Clubs round out the top four providers of afterschool care in the state.
- On average, New York families spend $21 per week for afterschool programs.*

Findings from the America After 3 PM household survey are based on parent/guardian responses to survey questions about after school care arrangements during the 2002-2003 school year. GE Consumer Finance and RTi-DFD conducted the survey and analyzed the data for the Afterschool Alliance, with support from the JCPenney Afterschool Fund. A complete analysis of state-level data and a full report from the survey will be available later this year. National data and previews of state data are available at www.afterschoolalliance.org.
