

Send Out a News Release About Your Trip to Washington, D.C.

Many advocates find that local newspapers, television or radio stations are interested in doing stories on their trip to Washington, D.C., to attend the Afterschool for All Challenge. On the trip home, fill in the blanks of the news release that follows, then distribute it to local media as soon as you can. (Don't let the release grow stale in a clearance process. It won't be news if it's three days old.)

When filling in the blanks of the news release, make certain that you fairly characterize what your representatives, senators or their aides said in your meetings. For example, if an aide said the Member of Congress would support increasing the 21st Century Community Learning Center (21st CCLC) afterschool appropriation, but didn't say to what level, be sure not to suggest an amount.

Send the news release to:

- Assignment desks of local TV and radio stations;
- Local education reporter(s) at daily newspaper(s);
- Assignment desks (or education reporters) of any community, ethnic or specialty newspapers;
- The newsletter editors at interested organizations—the school system, PTA, Boys & Girls Club, YMCA and others; and
- School system and community cable stations.

Don't overlook ethnic or other specialty outlets. Adjust the quote in the news release as you see fit, and be sure to mention in your quote any commitments from law makers or their aides—just be sure not to overstate what they told you!

If anyone in your traveling party maintains a blog or has posting privileges on one, you might consider arranging for an entry about the trip (see sample blog post in this packet).

[Your City] Leaders Say Congressional Meetings Provided Valuable Chance to Discuss How Afterschool Programs Help Kids, Families

'Breakfast of Champions' & Congressional Meetings Send Clear Message: Afterschool Kids Need More Federal Support

Afterschool supporters from [city or state] returned home today after a two-day visit to Washington, D.C., where they met with Members of Congress, including [list any senators or representatives from your state who attended the Breakfast or met with your group], to discuss the unmet need for more funding for afterschool programs. The visit was part of the 11th annual Afterschool for All Challenge, sponsored by the Afterschool Alliance.

[Your name,] [your title] of [your organization,] declared the visit a "wonderful chance to inform lawmakers about the ways afterschool programs support children and families." Joining [last name] on the trip were [name other local participants including their role and their organizational affiliation].

A highlight of the conference was a day-long visit to Capitol Hill, during which afterschool leaders met with hundreds of Members of Congress and their aides. The day began with the annual "Breakfast of Champions," honoring afterschool leaders and supporters, including Members of Congress. Dr. Paul Sereno and Gabrielle Lyon, founders of Project Exploration, were honored for their work providing mentoring and hands-on STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) education opportunities to those in underserved communities in Chicago. [Insert information on anyone from your state who was honored or participated in the program. Or make note of any locally recognizable speakers]. [City or state] conference participants met with [names of senators, followed by names of representatives,] as well as aides to [senators followed by representatives].

"Afterschool programs are facing significant challenges in these times of tight budgets and great need," said Afterschool Alliance Executive Director Jodi Grant. "Members of Congress need to hear from their constituents about the outstanding work afterschool programs are doing across their districts and states. That's the best way to remind them that we need to keep these programs going, and to grow the federal contribution to afterschool. Our advocates sent a loud and clear message this week—one we think will be hard to ignore."

The goals of the visits on Capitol Hill were to educate lawmakers about the unmet need for afterschool programs as they set priorities for federal funding and work toward reauthorizing the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, formerly No Child Left Behind. The theme of this year's Afterschool for All Challenge was "Transforming Research into Action." The day before visiting Members of Congress, participants were joined by researchers and other experts in exploring the rich evidence base on how before-school, afterschool and summer learning programs support a wide range of positive outcomes for children, families and communities. They then shared the highlights with their elected representatives.

Afterschool Alliance

In [name of community], a federal 21st Century Community Learning Centers grant supports the [name of afterschool program], but other worthy applicants were turned down because there were not enough funds available. The Afterschool Alliance is urging Congress to support funding for afterschool programs.

“The Afterschool for All Challenge was a great experience,” said [name and title]. “I’m lucky to be able to see every day the difference afterschool programs make in kids’ lives, keeping them safe, inspiring them to learn, and helping working families. I wanted to share that experience with lawmakers, and I think we made an impression on them. [Senator/Representative] said [s/he] would [support funding for afterschool OR consider our request, and we were very glad to hear it. We are hopeful he/she will conclude that the enormous benefits from afterschool programs are worth the modest investment.] Without secure federal funding, afterschool programs and the children and families they serve will suffer.”

According to the Afterschool Alliance’s 2009 America After 3PM report, a nationwide household survey on afterschool, sponsored by jcpenny:

- 15.1 million K-12 children are unsupervised in the afternoons, including 3.7 million middle school students and 1.1 million elementary school children.
- By contrast, just 8.4 million children are in afterschool programs.
- The parents of another 18.5 million children say they would enroll their children in an afterschool program if one were available.
